Transformation to What? Getting Past the "Messy in the Middle" Stage

March 16, 2017

The Rehabilitation Research and Training Center (RRTC) on Employment for People with Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (IDD) is hosting an informational online event as part of their popular "44 series" on provider organizational transformation. This transformation from segregated work settings is happening across the country, and can bring liberation and empowerment. But the process of change is not always easy or comfortable for individuals with IDD and their families.

A variety of issues can come up for people with IDD as the agencies that serve them switch to integrated employment:

1. They might stop getting a weekly paycheck when their workshop shuts down.
2. They might stop seeing their friends on a daily basis once the workshop closes.
3. They may get a part-time job, leaving the rest of the day needing to be filled.
4. Their family may feel the pressure of helping their child or sibling with IDD find and keep fulfilling work in the community.

So how do you get to an ending where people have a satisfying job and relationships in the community? Join the ThinkWork free webinar for a candid discussion on these concerns.
